When you live in a world that 's driven by money, people tend to make decisions that give them the most profit, rather than what adds the most value to people 's lives. For example, milk chocolate companies spend millions on advertising to get people to buy chocolates, even though their products are really just sugar at the end of the day.

The Difference Between Profit and Value - Personal Excellence

Good Profit is surprisingly good for my curiosity in understanding how to make money by keeping morals and showing consideration for others. It does have a high degree of subjectification so I would recommend anyone reading this to compare it against other similar advice in order to identify the biggest golden nuggets they can take out.
