parties who leave it unoccupied out of fear or uncertainty. The term was originally used to define a contested territory or a dumping ground for refuse between fiefdoms. In modern times it is commonly associated with World War I to describe the area of land between two enemy trench systems, which neither side wished to cross or seize for fear of being attacked by the enemy in the process. The term is also used to refer to ambig

Road sign on a quiet back road in the county of Cornwall, England, were no-man's land is being used to indicate an unowned or unclaimed stretch of land, rather than a tract of battled-over territory. If large enough, such a stretch of land could be use by nearby cattle or sheep owners as common grounds to graze their herds.
