The politics of North Korea takes place within the framework of the official state philosophy, Juche, a concept created by Hwang Jang-yop and later attributed to Kim Il-sung. The Juche theory is the belief that only through self-reliance and a strong independent state, can true socialism be achieved. North Korea's political system is built upon the principle of centralization. While the North Korean constitution formally guarantees protection of human rights, in practice there are severe limits

Today North Korea is perhaps the world's most closed country whose totalitarian political system is built on a family dynastic succession. Founded in 1948, the politics of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) or North Korea has been shaped by a constant interplay between the external security environment on the one hand, and political dynamics internal to its own history, culture, and society on the other hand.

Political power, as distinct from legislative power, is held by the Korean Workers' Party (KWP), whose highest authority is the Party Congress, led by an elected Central Committee. The KWP draws up lists of approved candidates for elections. Policy is directed by the KWP's political bureau (Politburo).

The South Korean government has stopped talking about human rights in North Korea and recently has even taken action against activists, including North Korean refugees, who engage in peaceful advocacy for change. But the biggest obstacle to a united international effort to end the abuses in North Korea is the Chinese government.
