The Allocation Of Health Care

The allocations process uses a statistical formula to make geographic distribution fair and objective, so that it more clearly reflects local healthcare need and helps to reduce health inequalities. This page contains the allocations and associated documents for the 2019/20 to 2023/24 allocations round.

Until the 20th century, US health care was allocated by the ability to pay or barter, with small numbers of individuals consuming the bulk of the resources, leaving few resources available to others. During the past 100 years, increased interest in good personal and public health resulted in the development of various forms of health insurance.

Allocation of Health Care Resources: Principles for ...

A methodological approach is needed for allocating health care resources in an efficient and fair way that gives legitimacy to decisions. Currently, most priority setting approaches tend to focus on single or limited benefit dimensions, even though the value of new health care interventions is multi-dimensional.

In areas of resource allocation within healthcare, the opinions of the public have consistently been shown to be different from those of healthcare professionals and politicians (Kinnunen 1998). In the emotive world of resource allocation in healthcare, we tend to assume that in order to provide care for an individual, we prevent other members of the public from accessing this care.

The Allocation of Health Care Resources: An Ethical ... Physicians' primary ethical obligation is to promote the well-being of their patients. Policies for allocating scarce health care resources can impede their ability to fulfill that obligation, whether those policies address situations of chronically limited resources, such as ICU (intensive care unit) beds, medications, or solid organs for transplantation, or "triage" situations in times of scarcity, such as access to ventilators during an influenza pandemic.

Allocating Limited Health Care Resources | American ... The methods and principles of allocating centrally provided health care resources to regions and areas are reviewed using the report of the Resource Allocation Working Party (RAWP) (Department of Health and Social Security, 1976) and the consultative document (Department of Health and Social Security, 1976a) as a basis.

Resource allocation is the distribution of resources – usually financial - among competing groups of people or programs. When we talk about allocation of funds for healthcare, we need to consider three distinct levels of decision-making.
Level 1: Allocating resources to healthcare versus other social needs.
