recap: The anxiety of obsolescence, a cultural pose struck by the
beleaguered postmodern
novelist, has at its root three discourses with which it is mutually constitutive. These discourses – the death of the novel, the threat of new technologies, and

putative death of the novel forms the heart of the anxiety of obsolescence. By depicting the genre as an endangered species,
critics and novelists alike
have built a protected
